TRACK COVERAGE

The widespread diffusion of Information and Communication Technologies (ICTs) has helped to make technology a ubiquitous part of our daily lives. This track seeks conceptual, theoretical, and empirical papers that demonstrate the strengths and contributions of research that focuses on individual, organization and society as they relate to the use and impact of ICT. Submissions that demonstrate the contributions of ICT to the on-going development of the fields of individual and organizational theory are also welcome.

RECOMMENDED TOPICS

This track encourages the submission of research papers, research-in-progress papers, teaching cases, and panel proposals in the following areas (but not limited to):

- ICT and new organizational forms, diffusion and global digital divide issues
- ICT-enabled process innovation, and collaboration within and between organizations with an emphasis on adoption, use and diffusion
- Continued use and adoption of ICTs and newer forms such as, social media and Enterprise "2.0" for organisations
- ICT and organizational change in global context with an aspect of adoption, use, diffusion or impacts
- The impact of ICT upon various social communities
- Continued use and adoption of ICTs and newer forms such as, social media for society
- ICT use and productivity in workplace
- Pre- and post adoption and use studies on ICTs and new forms of ICT
- Ethical, privacy and security considerations in ICT use and impact
- Evaluating the technological and non-technological aspects of the social impacts of ICT
